

Discover the free training school “Herb Power for Animal Health: From Tradition to Legislation”

Calling all young researchers and students in veterinary medicine, botany, and related fields! Join us in Warsaw, Poland, from February 12-14, 2025, for an exciting, free multi-day course on herbal veterinary medicine, covering legal, ethical, and scientific insights into the use of medicinal plants for animal health.

Are you passionate about the potential of medicinal plants in veterinary medicine? “Herbal Power for Animal Health: From Tradition to Legislation” offers an in-depth, multi-module course focusing on the applications and regulations of herbal veterinary medicines. You'll gain a unique understanding of medicinal plants, their uses and how they are transforming animal health, while navigating topics such as risk assessment, sustainability and the EU regulatory framework.

With lectures, hands-on sessions and opportunities to network with experts, this course will enable participants to deepen their knowledge of the sustainable sourcing, conservation and ethical use of herbs in animal health. Upon completion, participants will have an essential foundation in veterinary phytotherapy and will receive ECTS credits.

Limited places available - register before 31 December 2024!

Secure your place on this innovative programme at the Warsaw University of Life Sciences, where accommodation and travel costs can be reimbursed by COST.

Apply for the course here <https://anmeldeservice.fibl.org/herbpowerpoland2025>.

For more details contact Lerica le Roux-Pullen lerica.leroux-pullen@wur.nl.